

THE GROUNDWORK METHOD • BY JUNO COLLECTIVE

Community evidence

Field research that turns what a facility really means to a town into claims that hold up when somebody hostile reads them.

juno-collective.com

You are going to be asked what your facility has actually done for this town — by a reporter, a county board, or your own chief executive. Can you answer that today with something that holds up?

Most companies cannot. The investment number is published; what the place actually got is not.

Between asserting and convening

Corporate communications

Asserts. Starts from what the company wants said, and asks the town to believe it.

Community evidence

Verifies. Starts from what the town says, records it, sources it, and publishes only what survives.

Community engagement

Convenes. Brings people into a room, and leaves without a record anyone can audit.

The category is community evidence — the discipline between corporate communications, which asserts, and community engagement, which convenes.

Four moves, ten phases, in order

01

Audit and gap-find

What is already said about the market, and what nobody has checked.

1 Audit and gap-find

02

Baseline the before-picture

Where the market stood before, on an instrument every market shares.

Discover on the ground

The rooms, the tape, and the register that grows from them.

3 Champion mapping and outreach

04

Synthesize

The findings, the review, and what the next market inherits.

9 Close-out and codify

Durations are set at scoping. Market size, access and the volume of published claims all move them. The budget model prices the same ten phases.

Every claim carries its own evidence

Sourced

Every input traceable to a document, a dataset or a person on the record.

Verdicted

Every claim carries a verdict, not an assertion. The ones that fail are marked and the reason is kept.

Negatives counted

Findings that do not flatter the client stay in and visibly lower the score. Methodology published.

Consented

Interviews are long-form, on the record, and agreed in writing before anything is used.

Eight lines

01 Market Impact Assessment

A sourced evidence base: every claim registered and verdicted, the friction map, and the honest picture. Weeks rather than quarters.

02 Story & Champion Mapping

The story inventory and a consented champion map, plus the stakeholder universe — who the story touches, from officials to your own site staff.

03 Community Storytelling Program

Flagship film, champion profiles, short-form, photography and the activation toolkit — every asset traceable to the evidence base.

04 The Halo Index

A banded, annually re-scored measure of what a facility gives back, across five dimensions. Methodology published, negatives counted.

Eight lines, continued

05 Community Intelligence

The registers, the stakeholder map and the champion record as a living system — institutional memory that survives turnover.

06 The Playbook & Certified Researchers

The method as it is actually run and kept current, plus researchers trained against it: the same standard everywhere, verified by robust gates.

07 The Program Portal

One always-current place: schedule, deliverables, assets with thumbnails, transcripts. Nobody has to ask.

08 Claim Validation

The claims you already publish, taken one at a time and verdicted against the record — the ones that hold with their sources attached, the ones that do not, flagged.

WHERE IT HAS RUN

Proven in the field, not in a deck

A global technology company

The method was built and run for one, across three markets on two continents, with further markets in motion.

On the record

Long-form interviews with officials, employers, educators, suppliers and residents — consented, transcribed and registered.

Published under review

Findings taken through client review and external verification before anything carried a company's name.

The client is not named here. Naming rights travel with a separate clearance.

The next step is a conversation.

Short, no cost, and the output is a plain read of what a market would take and what it would return.
Scoping follows that, and only that.
